Agents Believed to Have Been Sent From Washington as Result of Andrews's Shake-Up.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMPTON BAYS, L. I. Aug. 30.— Four Prohibition agents dressed in evening clothes and riding in an expensive automobile, raided the Canoe Place Inn, one of the best-known roadhouses on Long Island, early this morning, seized four cases of alleged whisky and arrested the manager and a man said to have been a bartender.

The agents were sent into the district as a result of the recent shake-up ordered by General Lincoln C. Andrews.
They came to the exclusive society colony here a few weeks ago, took good lodgings and were always dressed in fashionable attire.

It was said that because of the familiarity of the roadhouse and hotel keepers of the neighborhood with the agents who had been working in the vicinity for some years the latter had been unable to obtain evidence against liquor law violators. The new men, it was believed, were dispatched from Washington for that reason.

They visited the Canoe Place Inn several times during the last two weeks and obtained enough evidence for the issuing of a search warrant. When they descended shortly after midnight the inn was crowded. They displayed their warrants, and after finding the alleged whisky, went into an alcove, where, they said, a bar was in operation, and arrested the bartender as he was mixing a drink.

Their visit caused consternation among the guests, for it was the first time in the Volstead era that the inn had been raided. The manager, John Fields, and the bartender, whose name could not be learned, were held in $1,000 bail for a hearing before a Federal Commissioner in Brooklyn.

The four agents who made the raid were Tinney, Miller, McMonagle and Carsie.

The Canoe Place Inn is within sight of the estate of the late Charles F.
Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall. He was a frequent guest in the pre-Volstead days, and held many political conferences with his lieutenants there during the Summer months. Governor Smith talked things over with him there several times.
